

Veterans Day Essay

The Army is a really hard place to work and my uncle was in it. My point of this essay is to tell you a little bit about my uncle being in the Army.

Here are some questions I asked my uncle. Were you scared at any point? He said no. Was it hard what you were doing? He said sometimes. I asked what was your favorite part? He said working as a team. So there are some questions that I asked my uncle.

In the Army he did military intelligence. Military intelligence is when people hear what other people are saying. He helps listen to other countries and if they were trying to do something bad he would tell on them and they would go into war. For that job you have to be really smart you have to pass a really hard test. So that is what my uncle does.

I asked my uncle another question. Would you recommend that people join the Army? He said yes. It would be a huge help if we got a lot more people to join because our country would be a lot stronger. My uncle said that he would go back into the Army which means he had a great time. I think people would have fun in the Army. The Army is an important job so if you want to join you have to be really smart and strong and a lot more, so I think that is why people should join.

That is what my uncle did in the Army and a few questions that I asked him. I think it was cool that he was in the army. I also think his job as military intelligence was really cool. He really liked it because I asked him if he would go back and he said yes so that's how I know he really likes the Army.
