Do you think that Veteran's Day is an important holiday? I do, and here are three reasons why: to honor those who fought for our freedom, to celebrate and learn more about wars, and to honor the soldiers that are alive because they sacrificed their lives to protect our country.

I think Veteran's Day is important because we can honor those who fought for our freedom. Those soldiers risked their lives to save us, and died while trying. Without them, we wouldn't be here now, and we should be thankful.

Another reason why I think Veteran's day is important is because we can celebrate our freedom and learn about wars. Since people always risk their lives for us, I think it's good to have a whole day about them. We should learn about the wars too, because someday we can become soldiers, and fight for more rights!

The last reason I think that Veteran's Day is important is because we can also honor the people who lived. On this day, we should give them respect. They did so much, and they earned a whole day for them. We can respect them, and they can tell us how it was like to be a soldier in a war.

So, those are my three reasons why I think that Veteran's Day is an important holiday. Those soldiers get badly hurt, wounded, or even killed, to save us from danger. Therefore, I respect veterans, and give them the kindness they need.
